How to score your symptoms

|                          |                                                                                        |
|--------------------------|----------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|
| Pain (0–10)       | 0 = no pain · 5 = noticeable but manageable · 10 = worst pain imaginable               |
| Urgency (0–10)    | 0 = no urgency · 5 = can wait a few minutes · 10 = cannot delay at all                 |
| Stool Frequency   | Count all bathroom trips including incomplete ones. Write the total for the day.       |
| Blood in Stool?   | Write Yes or No. If Yes, note whether it is a small streak or heavy bleeding in Notes. |
| Stress (L/M/H)    | L = low (calm day) · M = medium (some pressure) · H = high (very stressful day)        |
| Foods Eaten Today | Write the main foods you ate. Focus on anything unusual or new.                        |

Quick tips

|                     |                                                                          |
|---------------------|--------------------------------------------------------------------------|
| Consistency  | Fill in the tracker at the same time each day — evening works well.      |
| Honesty      | Record what you actually experienced, not what you think sounds better.  |
| Completeness | Even on good days, fill in each column. Patterns often hide in the data. |

What to highlight for your GI doctor

- Nighttime symptoms (waking to use the bathroom)
- Any day with blood in stool
- Pain scores of 6 or above
- Urgency scores of 8 or above
- Foods that consistently made symptoms worse
- Days you missed work, school, or activities
